MoMA

Good Design for Everyone

Welcome to a new year with MoMA.

This season's products arrive with bursts of color and a celebration of artists and art movements represented in MoMA's collection: Louise Bourgeois, Yoshitomo Nara, the De Stijl movement, and more. (You'll also find iconic designs that are in the collection, such as Josef Albers Nesting Tables.) As a continuation of MoMA's mission to educate the public about modern art and design, we've collaborated with students from the School of Visual Arts and the design firm Aruliden. We hope you find our selection delightful and inspiring.

The Graphic Appeal of De Stijl

These designs were produced to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the founding of De Stijl and to celebrate its lasting influence. De Stijl, the Netherlands-based art movement, embraced an abstract, minimalist aesthetic grounded in the basic visual elements of simple geometric forms, lines and primary colors. The movement's central figures were the painters Piet Mondrian and Theo van Doesburg.

Yoshitomo Nara

Since the mid-1990s, Yoshitomo Nara has exhibited around the world, working with a range of institutions he feels a strong affinity with. His approach to art-making is similarly dependent on his sense of connection to the process of creating; his paintings are expressions of colors that breathe life into his bold images; his sculptures bear traces of his fingers that have shaped their forms; and his drawings, a daily practice, capture the spontaneity of thoughts. Nara has also exhibited his photographic works to depict his daily life and travels. To celebrate the long relationship with Yoshitomo Nara and MoMA, we've closely collaborated to create an exclusive line of products that feature details of Nara's work.
